Red Cross Is Making Headway On Campaign

Workers Busy But Weather Slows Program

Because adverse weather conditions have slowed the active canvassing for the Red Cross, C. M. Swinehart, campaign chairman, has announced that there is no definite report on the progress of the campaign. Reports are expected this week end, however, from all of the various districts and campaign workers will be ready for next week's party.

Steamboat Springs residence district was canvassed this week by groups of women working under the direction of Mrs. E. W. Brummett and several of the volunteer workers reported that they had met an even better response than they anticipated.

The business district will be called upon next week, according to "Red," who is heading that phase of the drive.

Heavy snowfall accompanied by wind and drifting conditions have slowed work in the rural districts, which always have been the Red Cross work. It is hoped that clearing weather will prevail next week in order that these districts can be visited.

Elsewhere in the country the Red Cross has met with its usual fine response and the fund campaign is being carried on successfully. In many places of humanitarian work, the Red Cross makes a singular appeal to the heart of everyone in America. They know that the many services ready at a moment's call to alleviate suffering in many forms, to assist in times of disaster, to perform the duties of the Red Cross.

Routt county always has met the Red Cross appeal with more than the amount asked, and 1948 workers are confident that this year will be no exception.

VFW Style Show Brought Many For New Look

Many Models On Display At Exhibition

That "new look" in women's clothes was given a thoro airing last Saturday afternoon at the Chief theatre when the Dorothy shop and the VFW Auxiliary combined to give the Yampa valley one of the best style shows ever to be seen in this part of the country. Nothing was overlooked in showing all of the new styles now so prevalent, and the exhibition was a real treat for the eyes of the many who were styles of many years ago, the original "Gay Gibson" and the more recent and far more glamorous "rock of the 'twenties'."

Models stepped on to the stage thru a magic doorway as Miss Dorothy Wheeler, manager of the Dorothy shop, introduced the models. Each style was accurately described as the wearers turned so that the audience could get a full view of all sides of the clothing.

The show started with an Easter suit modeled by Mrs. C. G. Pickford, while Mrs. Rachel Keefe sang "Easter Parade." It progressed from there thru the Gay Gibson style, for which Mrs. Marvin Elkins sang "Bicycle Built for Two," to the final tableau of wedding gowns from 1880 to the present. Rev. and modern models were shown. The gown worn by her grandmother, which has been somewhat altered from its original style. Mrs. Robert Wier wore her mother's wedding gown of 1912, which she also wore for her own marriage in 1940, and Mrs. Leland Harris, of last fall modeled her 1947 formal wedding gown.

Just preceding the finale, evening gowns were shown and over them, Mr. Elkins sang "The Girl in the Red Dress." In Denver, with the exception of one silver fox jacket which was made from foxes raised at the Elkins, light-colored gowns were shown. Also from the Light foxes was the platinum fox throw shawl of silver fox skin, came from the Morris Fox farm near Milner.

Travel This Year Will Be Heavy

More than twice as many tourists are expected to visit Colorado this summer than last.

Lewis Cobb, state advertising director, said that almost seven thousand inquiries from potential visitors have been received by this office this year.

"The inquiries are from coupon-clipping 'dreamers,' who say they're from 'home' with an active interest in a trip here."

Cobb said that while state advertising is heavier than ever, "it is up only 50 per cent—while responses to it are up a hundred per cent."

Seniors Select Silas Marner As Class Play

Cast Named And Practice Is Started

Seniors of Steamboat Springs high school will present Silas Marner, as the play to be presented this year. Practice already has started and the show will be given April 9 at the school auditorium.

Of the wearing dates back to time immemorial. Even primitive man had conceived the idea of interlacing two sets of grasses or straw at right angles to make a crude requirements for dress. Up thru the ages the craft evolved until, in the 18th century, by the invention of the shuttle, it received its greatest impetus. At that period, it was the general custom for housewives to give their spinners a local or itinerant weaver to be converted on his loom into the necessary fabrics.

Mystery clung easily around any uncommon thing or person, at that time, and it was the superstition belief that the trade of weaving, indispensable tho it was, could not be carried on entirely without the help of the Evil One. Accordingly a weaver was looked upon with unpopularity and fear and distrust and tolerance only thru necessity. Such a weaver was Silas Marner, as portrayed in George Eliot's novel that little gem of blind prejudice and ignorance.

But Marner, as he toiled away unremittedly, did not dream that fate, the great Weaver of all, was even then weaving on her mystic loom a dramatic and momentary tapestry in which he himself was destined to form the principal pattern. It is this vivid design of love, deception and spiritual regeneration which threads its way slowly thru the immortal story of "Silas Marner."

And now, at last, you have the privilege of seeing the human character of this great book come to life behind the footlights in a gripping dramatic adaptation to the stage. The play will be given at the high school gymnasium.

Control Of Grubs Is Advocated By County Agent

Large Scale Program Is Proposed

It will soon be time to spray Routt county cattle for grubs, County Agent Guy Robbins announced this morning. The grub has been observed in the backs of cattle as early as two weeks ago, according to Mr. Robbins. The season appears to be later than it was last year.

More than 4,000 cattle were sprayed for cattle grubs and lice in 1947. Mr. Robbins said that spraying started March 20 and continued until June. Since it was the first large scale spraying done in Routt county, it was learned from last year's program which can be used to good advantage this year.

One fact learned last year was that both the common and northern grubs are in Routt county. Until this year specialists and others were under the impression that only the common grub was present in Routt county. The common grub emerges early and it completes its emergency period about 90 days after the grubs first appear in the backs of cattle. The northern grub, on the other hand, takes about 100 days to complete its emergency period. It is the only grub that sprays about 30 days apart were recommended last year. Many ranchers sprayed twice last year, thinking that their grub problem. They were surprised when grubs continued to emerge as late as two months after the first spraying or as much as three months after grubs were first seen in the backs of cattle.

The reason for the late emergence was that the northern grub emerges later than the common grub. The common grub usually is out of the backs of cattle in Routt county by the middle of May. The northern grub would be expected between April and July. To control both grubs at least four sprays are necessary.

Since most ranchers cannot spray more than twice before turning out on the range, it will be difficult for them to attain grub eradication, but the two treatments will help considerably. Ranchers are urged to spray at least twice before turning out on the range.

Another fact learned by those interested in cattle spraying in Routt county and elsewhere in the state was that the use of rotenone and lethane provide an excellent control method for grubs and lice in two treatments, a lethane-DDT combination is far superior for the control of lice. Because DDT and rotenone cannot be used together, a rancher must use the two treatments in a job on lice and a good one on grubs with two lethane-rotenone treatments or of doing an excellent job on lice with just one lethane-DDT treatment. The lethane-DDT treatment is not effective for grubs.

Mr. Robbins suggests that ranchers who want more detailed information on grub or lice control may obtain it from him.

Highways Cause Much Discussion In Denver Paper

Some Say Good, Most Say Bad, Here We Are

Routt county roads seem to be a center of controversy in Denver newspapers. The Steamboat Springs Chamber of Commerce got right in the middle. The New York Times and the Denver Post have been writing and talking about the roads of the organization. It was refused by the Chamber of Commerce, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Then the letters started. Here are a few of those sent to the News!

Oak Creek, Colo., Mar. 7th, 1948.

Mr. Maurice Leckenby.

Dear Sir:

Well, I have read your paper for a good many years and have always liked it and have read many, good, but I have never been able to get it. I have really stuck your neck out this time regarding our roads down this way.

I would really like to know what you would consider bad roads. Of course I am what you might call a "road hog" and I have been here some 21 years, but I have never seen them any worse. I don't believe I have ever seen a worse road than the one I am on now. I don't believe I have ever seen a worse road than the one I am on now.

I will venture the assertion that you are not the only one who is not of the county who will agree with you on this road condition. I will state that you are not the only one who is not of the county who will agree with you on this road condition. I will state that you are not the only one who is not of the county who will agree with you on this road condition.

I will state that you are not the only one who is not of the county who will agree with you on this road condition. I will state that you are not the only one who is not of the county who will agree with you on this road condition.

Special Election Is Called For School Addition

Vote Called For March 30 On Proposal

A special election has been called for March 30 to decide whether to issue $135,000 in bonds for the building of an addition to the Steamboat Springs school.

Here are the reasons the board of education decided to present the proposal to the taxpayers:

1. Proposed new addition to contain 12 classrooms, 2 elementary classrooms, 3 home Ec. department, suitable for adult education; 4. Heating plant adequate for this and future buildings; 5. Additional toilet facilities; 6. Steel lockers for the care and safekeeping of clothing and books.

2. Do we need this proposed addition? From the viewpoint of a business man, a school without children. Without additional space we will eventually, if not next year, need to exclude non-resident students from the Steamboat schools. This would mean that a large volume of business would be driven to our neighboring towns. 2. From the viewpoint of a parent, it is impossible to have a large number of children in school. Our children will become our security or our liability. An education necessary to success in a world of growing needs is impossible in crowded school room. Health conditions are very difficult to maintain. Study habits an discipline are hard to secure at all.

3. What are the conditions in our present school plant?

a. In 1943 we had an average daily attendance of 413. In 1946 we had an average daily attendance of 381. In 1945 we had an average daily attendance of 413. In 1946 we had an average daily attendance of 447. In 1947 we had an average daily attendance of 497. We have enrolled 562 students this year and will have approximately 600 students at approximately 525 to 530.

b. The toilet facilities in the present plant were designed for approximately 400 students. The number of children in the school is now approximately 600. The toilet facilities are in need of replacement.

c. Facilities for proper care and keeping of clothing are very poor. This results in the loss of many coats, caps, gloves and over shoes.

d. An over-crowded school increases fire hazards.

e. The existing heating plant was designed to heat the grade school and the high school buildings. We have since added the gymnasium and the new addition. The existing heating plant is old and operating on borrowed time.

f. The existing school has overflowed into the high school building and made an already crowded condition more so. The building is in need of replacement.

Commenting On Current Events

WE are very frank to say that we are confused about the Marshall Plan of spending billions to save Europe from the red tide that seeks to engulf the world. We are learning more of the details and purposes in the debate now going on in congress. We are a little alarmed at the hundreds of millions of dollars that are being piled on top of the billions we already owe. Even the supporters of the plan say it is a gamble, but they really believe it is worth a chance because it may save the world from a third world war, which would plunge civilization into the depths of chaos.

The speech of Senator Vandenberg in opening the debate on the bill is regarded by correspondents as one of the great speeches in that body. He, in the opinion of the world, launched the fight for quick enactment of the plan with the declaration that "it strives to stop World War III before it begins."

Senator Vandenberg declared to a tense and crowded senate: "The greatest nation on earth either justifies or condemns its leadership. We must choose. We are no blueprints to guarantee results. We are entirely surrounded by calculated and free profane beliefs that the opening program is the best of these risks. I have no quarrel with those who disagree because we are dealing with impossibilities. But I am bound to those who disagree that they have not escaped to safety by rejecting or subverting this plan. They have simply tried to take risks, and I fear far greater ones. I can only say that I prefer my choice of responsibilities."

ADVOCATES of the Marshall Plan have been greatly strengthened by occurrences in Czechoslovakia. It has thrown the world into an awareness of Communist methods and Communist aims. Moscow has challenged the West and especially the United States, to meet their challenge with vigor. In that little country the Communists seized power, abolished free speech and a free press, and the government and the army of opponents and established a police state, where it is all one's life is worth to criticize or disagree. All of this in the Russian version of liberty and a free people. Finland is to be next on the list. Some where there must be a halt. A show of appeasement or weakening now and we are lost.

The remarkable thing to us is that there are apparently honest and conscientious people in America. Henry A. Wallace and his followers, for example, who say it is all right, fully justified, to deny that Wallace has a substantial following in America is to shut our eyes to the truth. Jim Farley, keen politician, said the other day that Wallace would pick up a million votes in the coming election. He stays in the race it certainly portends a Republican president, and that would be a disaster, no disaster to national well-being, especially if it should mean a president of the Vandenberg stature.

The Wallace votes would ordinarily be cast for a Democratic candidate. A divided vote portends Republican success. The scene may change rapidly. Public opinion polls, which are fairly accurate, showed Truman at an all time low six months ago. He picked up rapidly for several months until he was a favorite against any candidate except Eisenhower, who has now declared himself out of the race. Then with the Wallace movement and the disaffection of the South over the civil rights program Truman stock took a nose dive in the polls. Opinion in the United States still is in a state of flux. Many things may happen to change the situation before the votes are cast in November. Anyway, we are sure that the democratic method will prevail, a free ballot and rule by the majority, or at least a plurality.

A RATHER strange thing about all this fuss raised by the Truman proposal for civil rights is that it has raised such a tempest when the same proposal was presented by President Roosevelt did not create any great commotion. Maybe the old master knew how to handle such things. We are sure the proposal so far as it concerns equality before the law and equality of opportunity, but the anti-lynching bill is an unnecessary encroachment on state's rights. Also the abolishment of the so-called Jim Crow or segregation measures are unwelcome. While present prejudice prevails, to enforce such things by national law would only be to increase racial prejudice and delay a final solution of the problem, a difficult one at best. It will work itself out in time if good judgment prevails, but it will not be done by fiat of law. It will come by education and slow elimination of prejudices.

You will find many helpful suggestions in the advertising columns of the Pilot.

So What?

By MAURICE LECKENBY

THE Steamboat Springs Chamber of Commerce has reiterated its belief that Engineer Mark Watrous and the highway department are doing a good job.

Many people in Oak Creek are highly critical of this stand and believe the department is doing a terrible job and should be condemned.

There is no reason for any disagreement between the two towns of Routt county. Both have one object in view—the building of a better highway system and more adequate roads.

There are several facts that must be borne in mind to fully appraise the situation.

No one is entirely satisfied with the road system. Improvements are needed in every part of the state. For the most part we believe Routt county to be better off than many sections.

A start has been made on some of the improvements so greatly needed in Routt county after many years of inaction. One contract was let and nearly completed last summer on Highway 131 between Steamboat Springs and Oak Creek. It probably would have been finished had there not been a dispute about gravel prices early in the year, preventing as early a start as had been anticipated. That was not the fault of the department.

The Gore Pass Highway 131 from the end of the present project to Haybro will be started as early as possible in the spring. Contract also has been let for rebuilding from Toponas south toward State Bridge.

The Gore Pass Highway is being rebuilt from the Grand county side and Steamboat Springs is just as anxious as Oak Creek to see it made into a fine, all-weather highway.

All the projects aiding the entire county and a special benefit to the southern end of the county have eventually will be rebuilt and the Watrous took charge of the department. There was endless confusion and dilly-dallying before that and nothing was done.

True, Highway 131 from Oak Creek is in terrible shape and has been for a number of years. It is possible that the better and Steamboat Springs is just as anxious as anyone to see that done.

The decision to make Highway 40 the main road thru this section of the state was made many years ago, and decided by state and federal road heads. It is too late to change that action now as it probably always will be the main route and having it in good shape benefits the entire county. Certainly it is not going to be abandoned after all the money that has been spent on it.

It must be remembered that it was only a year ago that the additional two-cent a gallon tax on motor fuel was levied by the legislature. It must be remembered that Mark Watrous has been head of the department only slightly more than that.

It seems to us that criticism of the department at this time is somewhat premature. That is the reason the Steamboat Springs Chamber of Commerce is going to string along with the department and await developments.

We want more and better roads for all Routt county and we hope we are going to get them. Taking the hide off the highway department at this time doesn't seem the most logical way to get what we all are wanting.

GENE CERVI in his splendid weekly news letter sounds a note of optimism this week. He believes the Rocky Mountain region is in a continued prosperity because of steadily increasing population and expanding industrialization. He has conferred with many business leaders in the region and without exception they are going ahead with plans for growth and progress.

We can assure him that the same note of confidence can be sounded so far as this section of the state is concerned. This region is continuing to grow and develop and there is not a ray of pessimism to be seen.

Farm Folks

By VIRGINIA ANDREW

Slowly the living pages of Routt county's pioneer history are being turned, passing one by one the life span of our early day settlers. Last week Peter Van Dorn of Twenty-mile ended almost a century of life in quiet death at home on the ranch where he had lived for 46 years. Mr. Van Dorn was 94 years old and retained until the time of his death a most unusual memory which could at will call forth a vasty colorful panorama of events from that remarkably long lifetime. Since Mrs. Van Dorn's death in 1941 he seldom left the ranch and was too frail to take any active part in outdoor work, but he continued his lively interest in national and community affairs, and always enjoyed the visits of his friends. He leaves not only to his children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, but to his friends, a rich heritage of memories and experiences which time cannot dim or erase. Thus does history live in the personalities of the men and women who make it.

Farmers in California's great central valley have had a rude awakening during the past few months. Not only has the usual copious supply of winter rainfall failed them, but their supply of water from underground sources is falling as well. This is a tragedy which conservationists foresaw some time ago, and about which they have repeatedly warned not only California farmers but those in other areas as well.

Irrigation water comes from two sources. It's most widely used source is the rivers and streams of the nation, either supplying water directly from their banks or from ponds held back by dams. The second and great source of irrigation water is from artesian wells which are drilled on the farmers property and supply water for their own personal irrigation needs. Irrigation water can be obtained from streams and dams only through legal proceedings which determine the amount of water allotted to each user. When the water comes from streams which have gotten under way since Mark Watrous took charge of the department, there was endless confusion and dilly-dallying before that and nothing was done.

Many factors determine the amount of water available to run into streams and rivers. The most important is the amount of rainfall which falls in the form of rain or snow on the watershed from which the water flows. If the watershed is overgrazed or too-intensive lumbering activities, run-off is rapid and after high spring freshets have passed there is but little moisture to keep the streams flowing. Part of the serious water shortage in California is due to this factor. It seems hard for many water users to realize that they are very acutely affected by what takes place at the headwaters of a stream hundreds of miles away.

Many farmers in the stricken area were but little concerned over the shortage of water in streams and reservoirs because they possessed on their own land artesian wells which seemed capable of producing unlimited quantities of water. All they had to do in times of dry weather was to turn on the pumps. In fact some large scale water users have been heard to boast that if government agencies decided to regulate the acreage which could be irrigated from publicly owned irrigation projects they would simply pump their own water and ignore surface water irrigation. These boasts were based on the belief that the underground lakes which supplied water for artesian wells were inexhaustible. Such is not the case. Water is supplied to these subterranean lakes thru a slow process of filtration thru the soil above and by means of underground streams which bring water down from areas of heavy precipitation. When little moisture falls or when it is lost through rapid run-off, it does not add to the underground water supply. Pumping from many wells does not appreciably lower the level of the "water table" as long as water continues to run into the underground lake, but when the inflow stops or is noticeably decreased, the water table begins to fall rapidly. Since times of drought put heavy loads on artesian wells it does not take long to overdraw the water bank-account. California's underground water table has fallen as much as 30 feet in some places during the past year. This is a serious loss which can not be replaced by many years of rainfall, even given ideal soil conditions. As a result many wells have failed and the farmers are left without this last source of water supply. Water can make a desert bloom, but when the desert's production expands beyond the limits of the water supply, some land and production is bound to suffer. There is another serious danger to some of California's farmland. The falling water table has allowed the farm land above it to sink in places to such a degree that it is now in some places to or below the level of the sea. Salt water, normally held back by pressure of fresh water reservoirs, is now flowing into the streams and endangers plant life and soil fertility.

This is a situation which has arisen in central California which will affect agricultural production not only for this year but many years to come. This year's dry season was a further aggravation of the over-exploited water system. Many years of prodigious water usage have left the water table dangerously low. California is not the only state which can be so stricken. Water shortages can develop anywhere where water is used for conservation methods are kept up over long periods of time. Farmers and stockmen are not the only people directly concerned by these shortages. Many industries and millions of people are affected.

The story at the head of this page is about farmers and ranchers making the most of their grasslands. By good planning, managing well, and operating efficiently, they can grow more grass, produce more food for the world, and make more money.

While writing that story, I was struck by a similarity in the Swift business. For it is careful planning and efficient operation that keep us in business, too. Like you with your grassland, we've got to make the most of what we have. We've got to practice efficiency. We, also, must cut costs, operate with economy. Not only the important economy of finding uses and markets for every possible by-product, but economy and efficiency all along the line.

Maybe you saw Swift's recent financial report for 1947. It showed that we earned $22,334,977 after provision of $12,000,000 for high cost additions to fixed assets. This earning represented one cent out of our average dollar of sales. That one cent was earned in large part by the savings we made. The operating figures of our business prove that statement. They show where the savings came from. New methods of doing things which save time and cost. Modern equipment replacing old, worn equipment. Better ways of doing things. Swift research to produce, use and handle Swift products. A small saving here . . . another there . . . little economies pyramiding into big economies. Until, added together, the savings which we made last year in the actual day-by-day operation of the Swift business amounted to a considerable part of our earnings.

Careful planning, good management and efficient operation are "musts" in our business as in yours. "Little things" can often add up to the difference between a profit and a loss.

Tales of the Old West

SCRAPS OF HISTORY

We are told that "gold is where you find it." So is lead, so is zinc, so are quick-silver and copper. The story of mineral wealth is the story of accident. In 1945 an Indian hunter named Diego Huaco was chasing a goat up one of the most formidable mountains of Bolivia. He came to a ledge and he caught hold of a bush. The bush came out by the roots. Clinging to them and straining the torn veins and masses of silver glittered in the eyes of the hunter. Thus were discovered what for centuries have been world-famous silver mines of Potosi.

The badger, the prairie dog and the gopher are the mascots of the mining West. Coyotes and burros seem to have directed more prospectors to "pay" than all the practical geologists combined. In 1859 "Pancake" Comstock, a half witted prospector, saw "some queer looking stuff" in a gopher hole. He ran over and dug and scooped out dirt sprinkled with gold and silver. The great Comstock lode was located.

In the fall of 1857 a mob of army trackers, freshly discharged by General Albert Sidney Johnston, struck out from Fort Bridger, Wyo. for somewhere. In the vicinity of what is now Denver they noticed tracks of a party of men. They followed the tracks and pretty soon came upon two newly-made graves. Something about the graves, however, appeared suspicious. In those days, traders cached their goods in the ground. The Fort Bridger men investigated the mound and scooped out much trouble dug up two casks of Kentucky whiskey. In no time they were hilariously drunk and had matched a horse race. The course across the prairie was indented with prairie dog holes but that made no difference to the frolicsome riders, and so they named the race. The name of Nathaniel A. called them for short, led the race, but just before he reached the line his horse plunged into one of the holes throwing him. So that his head was rammed up to the shoulders in another hole. The lick slightly sobered him and he extricated himself and he took note of the gravel into which he had burrowed.

"Boys," he yelled, "this looks like Hang Town grit."

Hang Town was the most famous mining camp in California. Pick and pan were soon out; sluice boxes were hauled from cottonwood logs. Within six months the hills and mountains around the prairie dog town were alive with gold diggers.

About 1850 100 postal clerks in Washington picked up 100 men and sent them to Alexander Topece at Bellevue, Idaho, to stake a prospector. When Topece received the money, he spied Dan Scriven.

"Dan," he said, "what are you doing now?"

"Nothing."

"How would you like to do a little prospecting?"

"Fine."

Dan outfitted, struck for Wood river and pitched his camp in a shady place near water and grass. He hobbled one horse, put a bell on the other and turned them loose. The next morning he could neither see nor hear anything of his horses. The often quoted saying of an old prospector comes to mind: "How long have you been prospecting in these mountains?" somebody asked him. "Nigh on to 40 years," he answered. Then he caught himself. "I haven't exactly been prospecting all that time, though. About 30 of them years I've been looking for burrows; just 10 years were left for actual prospecting."

Dan Scribner began climbing a hill so that he could get a view of the country and thus perhaps locate his horses. Half way up he saw a badger hole and stopped to look at the rock that the badger had thrown out.

He found a fine piece of galena. He went back to his tent and got a pick. Before noon he had uncovered three feet of almost solid galena ore running high in silver. Let the horses hunt him up. What became of the badger is not told. The mine was named the Minnie Moore and it sold for $500,000.

The new dishes and silverware for the Community Club are now in use at the Community room. ## Glenwood Wins Basketball Meet Glenwood Springs defeated Craig Saturday night to win the Western Slope basketball championship.

This is the first time Glenwood Springs has won the slope title. They were runners up last year, and were defeated in the 1946-47 and 44 tournaments. Glenwood will represent the western slope as number one team in the A tournament at Denver next week and Craig represents the slope as number two team in the state tourney.

Neither team seemed especially inspired or determined in the first period and first part of the second game. In the last half of the second stanza with Glenwood leading 13 to 7, Lyons, caught fire for Craig and put two into the hoop in a matter of seconds. Glenwood also stepped up in the second half. Wright and Avgares scored for Craig and Nordberg connected on two for Glenwood.

Tempo of the third period was slower again, each team making only four points. Both aggregations seemed to be in a quarter quarter Craig threatening through with an outcome in doubt until the last second. Early in the period, Craig narrowed the Demon lead to two points, 23 to 21.

Craig players missed enough free throws in the second half to win. The Demon made 11 of 17 attempts or 23 per cent and five of eight free throws or 61 per cent.

Craig made 10 of 43 shots or 24 per cent. On free throws, the Bulldogs made six of 16 or 37 per cent.

Fishermen Petition

For Open Season In Coming Year

Six petitions are now circulating through Craig to open fishing in Moffat county throughout the year. One hundred and fifty signatures have been added to one of the petitions since they were started two weeks ago.

Petitions were started by Ray Foster and other Craig fishermen believing that fishing would eliminate many of the less desirable fish from Moffat county streams and lakes and improve conditions for trout.

At present, it is reported that streamers and snappers are being stocked. Only so many fish can inhabit a stream and the time and it is felt that removal of the larger fish would only make room for the small ones to grow to maturity.

The petitions in the state have been permitted to open fishing the year around by the fish and game commission upon request.

Craig fishermen feel that the same privileges will be granted to them. Later on they hope to get a game warden to conduct a program of fishing to screen the game fish from the suckers and trout.

The signed petitions will be presented to the State Fish and Game commission in Denver.

Leadville Blows

Steam In Pipes

Two mile high Leadville blows live steam into its water mains in an effort to keep ice from clogging them.

This information was written into records of the Colorado Public Utilities commission at a hearing of the Leadville Water company request to increase rates.

The practice was outlined by Vincent J. Jones of Las Vegas, N. M., city engineer specializing in water systems.

Under cross examination, Jones said that the practice logically could not be expected to keep the water from freezing up, but he added: "They do it, and the water keeps flowing."

He listed the short season for making repairs as another factor which makes the Leadville water system costly to operate. Describing repairs on the reservoir, he said work could be done only five weeks a year. He also said that even in July workers laying pipe found frost in the ground below four feet.

Jones' testimony marked opening of the hearing. When he concluded the hearing was recessed until March 15 with the next session to be held at Leadville.

Highway Names New District Heads

State Highway Engineer Mark U. Watrous announced Tuesday the appointment of three state highway engineers to new district positions of district engineers.

He explained that the move is part of a general plan of streamlining the department for closer supervision and coordination of construction and maintenance work in the field.

The appointments, which become effective March 15, are as follows: William L. Walsh, a construction engineer, will become district engineer for northeastern Colorado, with headquarters in Denver.

Charles E. Shumate, at present assistant district engineer, will have charge of the Southern Colorado district, with headquarters at Pueblo.

George V. Miller, a division engineer, will take over the northwest Colorado district and will be headquartered at Pueblo to Grand Junction. Establishment of the district offices is in line with other changes in procedure and the general administrative set-up of the highway department to promote greater efficiency and make the most out of the shortage of engineers.

The district engineers and Douglas N. Stewart, superintendent of maintenance, will operate under direct supervision of Watrous. James D. Bell, assistant highway engineer.

Federal Inspectors Say Change Can Be Made At Wage

Several corrective measures designed to increase conformance with the Federal Mine Safety Code were proposed by Federal coal mine inspectors following a reinspection of the Victor-American Fuel Company's 600-ton-a-day Wadsworth mine, at Mount Harris, Colo., the Bureau of Mines announced today.

The Routt County mine, employing 128 men, was reexamined in January by inspectors William B. Rae and George B. Fritts.

Although timbering practices were generally good and the mine was ventilated adequately, the inspectors suggested the removal or support of some unsafe roof, use of blowers fans that are permissible-type, and precautions to avoid ventilating active workings with air from abandoned or worked-out places.

To supplement the coal-dust control program, the inspectors recommended rock-dusting working places in the 10A section and the 11 north back entry. Other recommendations called for safer transportation of explosives and storage of charged Carbox shells, precautions before firing blasts, approved attachment of the rope on the relay hoist, insulators for power lines in the 10A air course, frame grounds for some mining machines, and drills with overcurrent protection for cables, and adequate underground fire protection. Provision of self-rescuers was also recommended.

The court order will ask the city clerk to show cause why the election should be called off.

In a campaign seeking better handling of road and water problems in Rangely, the Progressive party has challenged the incumbent Citizens' party administration headed by Mayor Fred Nichols.

(Copied from The Denver Post.)
Clifford H. Stone, state water conservation director, wrote Colorado senators in Washington, D. C., Monday asking them to seek an appropriation, as part of the regular reclamation program, for construction of a power line from Green Mountain dam to the Oak Creek community.

The power line, which would be part of the Colorado-Big Thompson project, would be about 75 miles long and would serve communities, coal mines and the rural electrification administration project in that area.

Stone pointed out that five major coal companies and a number of smaller ones are involved in the operations because of lack of power. These coal mines supply about 20 percent of the commercial coal tonnage in Colorado, Stone said.

Governor Knous endorsed Stone's request Monday, calling the project "highly desirable."

Want To Remove County Seat

(Copied from an edition of the Yampa Leader dated May 17, 1912.)
Last week the Steamboat Pilot good-naturedly asserted that Oak Creek was a little too previous in the county seat removal matter as no petition had yet been circulated, no election had been ordered, and, in fact, the removal of the county seat was not at this time an issue. This nettled Editor Wood of the Oak Creek Times and he retorted that a location closer to the center of population is decidedly an isssue with the taxpayers of the county this year, and they propose to see that the campaign is carried to a successful conclusion and that it be located at Oak Creek.

The above was apparently in reference to the removal of the county seat from Hahn's Peak to a more centrally located community. That Oak Creek lost out in the end to Steamboat Springs is self-evident.

The same paper also makes reference to the building of that place now known as the bank building to the effect that "The capitol stock for the new hotel at Oak Creek is divided into 15,000 shares of $1.00 each."

Dr. Pankey is handling the proposition.

Another item "The town board of Oak Creek last week accepted a proposition made by the Shepherd Engineering Company for the installation of a municipal water system for the taxpayers at special election OK the proposition."

And still another "J. J. Argo, a Denverite, has undertaken to finance the extension of the Moffat road from Steamboat to Craig by private subscription." Also at this time the railroad was known as the D. N.W.&P. Railway as proclaimed in an advertisement in the same issue.

Editors and publishers of the Yampa Leader in the year 1912 were J. W. Sherman and H. B. Sherman. Also incorporated in the 8-page newspaper are glowing reports of a battle in the war of the United States against the Mexican rebels. The Americans were led by General Huerta. The painful beginnings of unionism are commented upon in several articles.

J. R. Hamlin was in this paper and will be more than glad to let anyone who is interested look it over.

A Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America
Whereas the American National Red Cross, in accordance with the provisions of its federal charter, continue to give succor to victims of disaster, to render special services to our armed forces, and in many other ways to contribute to the health, safety, and welfare of our people; and

Whereas in 1947 the Red Cross expended a sum in excess of $11,000,000 on account of disasters alone, aiding the victims of the greatest number of calamities in any single year of the organization's history; and

Whereas in response to a growing need, recognized by numerous medical leaders, the Red Cross has now embarked upon a national blood-donor program, designed eventually to furnish whole blood and blood derivatives to the entire nation without cost therefor; and

Whereas the Red Cross must stand ready to provide assistance to millions of American war veterans in their readjustment to civilian life and to furnish added comfort, entertainment, and relaxation to them in government hospitals; and

Whereas this organization, which exemplifies the noblest instinct of mankind—the desire to aid one's fellow man—is now issuing its 1948 appeal for contributions totaling $75,000,000.

Now, Therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America and Honorary Chairman of the American National Red Cross, do hereby designate March 1948 as Red Cross Month; and I urge every citizen to respond as generously as possible to this humanitarian cause.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this eighteenth day of February in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-eight, and of the Independence of United States of America the one hundred and seventy-second.

Mountain lions have been steadily increasing in Colorado for several years. Bryan Denton of La Veta, fur inspector in charge of the Game and Fish department's predatory animal control program, disclosed in a radio address in Denver Thursday night. Denton has killed 39 mountain lions during the past year as a hunter and trapper with the department. He uses only a 22-caliber revolver to kill the big cats. His address will be broadcast over all 12 Colorado radio stations carrying the game and fish program.

"I take this opportunity to offer the hearty congratulations of all of us in the FBI for this outstanding piece of work in the highest and best tradition of law enforcement. ## Junior High Party

One of the prettiest parties of the year was held in the gym Friday evening, when the members of the Junior High School, under the leadership of their parents, members of the local board of education, and other guests at their annual party. An unusually large crowd of parents and friends was present.

A short program revealed varied and interesting talents in these classes. Then, followed a Grand March so expertly done that all present applauded. Folk and square dances occupied the evening until refreshments were served. The supper line was led by the eighth grade class president, Darlene Truax.

Seventh graders served sandwiches, cake and punch from candle-lit tables. Blue and white sweet peas—class colors and flowers for the eighth grade—were the centerpiece. Boys and girls, parents and teachers filled the floor to enjoy the last few minutes of dancing together. The Junior High classes wish to thank their parents—especially Mrs. Frank Trull and Leslie Snow—for a lovely party. They also appreciate the work done by the teachers and cooperation of the custodian. The parents, teachers, and friends were very proud of the Junior High boys and girls. It was a grand party, kids!

Norwegians Make Competition Tough

Five members of America's Olympic ski team—along with 220 skiers from 17 other nations—admitted anew Monday that you can't beat the Norwegians at their own game. In competition at Oslo, Norway, Gordon Wren of Steamboat led the competition.

Showing little fear as they darted down a dangerous fog-screened course, the Norwegians made a clean sweep of all events in the classic Holmenkollen Ski Jumping championships before 80,000 fellow countrymen. King Haakon was there.

The Americans, more intent on saving their lives than winning a cup, finished far back in the standings. Gordon Wren, Aspen, Colo., turned in the best U. S. performance, gaining 34th place as he jumped 187 and 180 feet. Other Americans who competed were Don Johnson of Salt Lake City, Utah, Ralph Townsend of Lebanon, N. H., Arthur Devlin of Lake Placid, N. Y., and Barney McLean of Denver. McLean finished 108th.
